In Uganda nearly 2 million children have lost one or both parents to AIDS. Increasing numbers of young and adolescent people are now head of their families - raising themselves and their siblings without the daily care and guidance of a trusted adult. These children are vulnerable to exploitation and abuse. They are also likely to be out of school and struggling with psycho-social challenges. We at KIDA hope to enable these children into some form of education and to provide quality health care for them. We offer education through drama and counseling and a home care visiting Program.
